

THE FYRSTE

callyd Chilus, by the lasse dygestion made apte to be converted into bloud. In this humour, water hath dominion moſte principall.

Fleume vnnaturall is that, whyche is myrte with other humours, oꝛ is altered in his qualitie: And thereof is. viii. sondy kyndes, Watry, whyche is founde in spettyll of great drynkers, oꝛ of them, whyche dygeste yll.

Slymy oꝛ rawe.

Glaſy, lyke to whyte glaſſe, thycke, viscouſe lyke byde lyme and heuy. Plaſtry, whyche is very groſſe, and as it were chalky, ſuche is found in the topntes of theym, whyche haue the gowte.

fleume.

Salt, which is myngled with colet. Sower, myrte with melancoly, whyche commeth of corrupt dygestion. Harſhe, thycke and groſſe, whyche is ſeldome founden, which taſteth like greene crabbes oꝛ ſloes.

Stiptike oꝛ binding, is not ſo groſſe noꝛ cold, as harſh, and hath the taſt lyke to greene redde wyne, oꝛ other lyke, ſtraypnge the tunge.

Choler dothe participate with naturall heate as longe as it is in good temperance. And thereof is alſo two kyndes,

Natu-

BOOK.

Naturall and Vnnaturall.

Naturall colet is the ſome of blode, the coloꝛ whereof is redde and clere, oꝛ moꝛe like to an oꝛege colour, and is hot and drye, wherein the ſice hath dominion, and is lyght and ſharpe, and is ingendyed of the moſt ſubtyll parte of matter decocte, oꝛ boyled in the ſtomacke, whoſe begynnynge is in the lpuer.

Choler natural,

Vnnaturall choler is that whyche is myrte oꝛ corrupted with other humours, whereof be foure kyndes, Citrine oꝛ pelowe choler, whyche is of the myxture of naturall choler, and watry fleume, and therefore hath leſſe heate than pure choler.

Yelky, lyke to pelkes of egges, whyche is of the myxture of flewme congeled, and choler naturall, and is yet laſſe hote than the other.

Greene lyke to lekes, whoſe begynnynge is rather of the ſtomak, thā of the lpuer. Greene lyke to greene canker of mettall, and bourneth lyke benym, and is of excedynge aduſtyon of choler oꝛ flewme, and by theſe two kyndes nature is moꝛtiſyed.

Melancoly oꝛ blacke colet is deuyded into two kyndes.

C

Naturall